Who will Win, Tortoise or Hare?

Tiry, micro, small, start-ups, technopreneurs or self-employed, the SME constituency in India is huge, contributing to the livelihoods of millions of people. Tortoises and hares, they are guided by survival to micro-multinational aspirations. As the economy slows down, they are taken aback, as one gathers it from the field.

But, panic is not the answer. Think hard and act today. The twenty-second in the prestigious MSMER Series from ISED Small Enterprise Observatory, India Micro, Small and Medium Enterprise Report (MSMER) 2019, makes the learnings into actionables.

Unlike the beaten track, it proposes an innovative policy approach and strategy, based on Incia's diverse economic reality and cultural heritage: the 'Tortoise and Hare Strategy'. India's millions of entrepreneurs differ in terms of their outlook, approach, and business strategies. But, each of them being a wealth creator, need to be recognized and respected in his/her own right. What is the way forward? It discusses the story of 8 subsectors, Automobiles, sports goods, Textiles and Hosiery, Media and Entertainment, Automobiles, Pharmaceuticals, food processing, bicycles, and more.

A 'don't-miss' title for entrepreneurs, financial institutions, promotional agencies, researchers, Management schools and government departments (more at www.isedpublications.org)
